1.

Chapter One

VOCABULARY

bourdon – the lowest note

conjectures – odd opinions

disquiet – unease, restlessness

divan – a backless couch

dowagers – widows with money or titles inherited from their husbands

enmity – hatred, dislike ensconced – sheltered

languidly – lazily

lionize – to exalt; treat as a celebrity

listlessly – without energy

précis – a summary

proletariat – low social class

scrupulous – careful; precise truculent – stubborn

Identily the following characters:
a. Lord Henry Wotton
b. Basil Hallward
c. Dorian Gray
c. Dorian Gray

_	important?
-
_
-
1	What prediction does Basil Hallward make about the three of them?
-
-
7	Vhat contrast does Lord Henry make between Basil and Dorian?
_
1	That is the significance of the portrait Basil is working on?
_
(ccording to Basil, how has Dorian affected his work as an artist?
_
_
-

of the firm. That is all." (Pg. 17) b. "The ugly and the stupid have the best of it in this world." (Pg. 15) c. "the one charm of marriage is that it makes a life of deception absolutely necessary for both parties." (Pg. 15) d. "I choose my friends for their good looks, my acquaintances for their good		Why does Basil say he will never exhibit the portrait?
Explain the allusion to Narcissus. Discuss these epigrams from Lord Henry. How do they reveal his character? a. "Conscience and cowardice are really the same things Conscience is the trader of the firm. That is all." (Pg. 17) b. "The ugly and the stupid have the best of it in this world." (Pg. 15) c. "the one charm of marriage is that it makes a life of deception absolutely necessary for both parties." (Pg. 15) d. "I choose my friends for their good looks, my acquaintances for their good characters, and my enemies for their good intellects. A man cannot be too careful Explain the allusion to Narcissus. Discuss these epigrams from Lord Henry. How do they reveal his character? a. "Conscience and cowardice are really the same things Conscience is the trader of the firm. That is all." (Pg. 17) b. "The ugly and the stupid have the best of it in this world." (Pg. 15) c. "the one charm of marriage is that it makes a life of deception absolutely necessary for both parties." (Pg. 15) d. "I choose my friends for their good looks, my acquaintances for their good characters, and my enemies for their good intellects. A man cannot be too careful
Explain the allusion to Narcissus. Discuss these epigrams from Lord Henry. How do they reveal his character? a. "Conscience and cowardice are really the same things Conscience is the trader of the firm. That is all." (Pg. 17) b. "The ugly and the stupid have the best of it in this world." (Pg. 15) c. "the one charm of marriage is that it makes a life of deception absolutely necessary for both parties." (Pg. 15) d. "I choose my friends for their good looks, my acquaintances for their good characters, and my enemies for their good intellects. A man cannot be too careful		Why does Basil not want Lord Henry to meet Dorian? What promise does he want
Discuss these epigrams from Lord Henry. How do they reveal his character? a. "Conscience and cowardice are really the same things Conscience is the trade-to of the firm. That is all." (Pg. 17) b. "The ugly and the stupid have the best of it in this world." (Pg. 15) c. "the one charm of marriage is that it makes a life of deception absolutely necessary for both parties." (Pg. 15) d. "I choose my friends for their good looks, my acquaintances for their good characters, and my enemies for their good intellects. A man cannot be too careful		· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·
Discuss these epigrams from Lord Henry. How do they reveal his character? a. "Conscience and cowardice are really the same things Conscience is the trade-to of the firm. That is all." (Pg. 17) b. "The ugly and the stupid have the best of it in this world." (Pg. 15) c. "the one charm of marriage is that it makes a life of deception absolutely necessary for both parties." (Pg. 15) d. "I choose my friends for their good looks, my acquaintances for their good characters, and my enemies for their good intellects. A man cannot be too careful Discuss these epigrams from Lord Henry. How do they reveal his character? a. "Conscience and cowardice are really the same things Conscience is the trade-to of the firm. That is all." (Pg. 17) b. "The ugly and the stupid have the best of it in this world." (Pg. 15) c. "the one charm of marriage is that it makes a life of deception absolutely necessary for both parties." (Pg. 15) d. "I choose my friends for their good looks, my acquaintances for their good characters, and my enemies for their good intellects. A man cannot be too careful
 a. "Conscience and cowardice are really the same things Conscience is the trade-to of the firm. That is all." (Pg. 17) b. "The ugly and the stupid have the best of it in this world." (Pg. 15) c. "the one charm of marriage is that it makes a life of deception absolutely necessary for both parties." (Pg. 15) d. "I choose my friends for their good looks, my acquaintances for their good characters, and my enemies for their good intellects. A man cannot be too careful 		Explain the allusion to Narcissus.
 a. "Conscience and cowardice are really the same things Conscience is the trade-of the firm. That is all." (Pg. 17) b. "The ugly and the stupid have the best of it in this world." (Pg. 15) c. "the one charm of marriage is that it makes a life of deception absolutely necessary for both parties." (Pg. 15) d. "I choose my friends for their good looks, my acquaintances for their good characters, and my enemies for their good intellects. A man cannot be too careful
 a. "Conscience and cowardice are really the same things Conscience is the trade-of the firm. That is all." (Pg. 17) b. "The ugly and the stupid have the best of it in this world." (Pg. 15) c. "the one charm of marriage is that it makes a life of deception absolutely necessary for both parties." (Pg. 15) d. "I choose my friends for their good looks, my acquaintances for their good characters, and my enemies for their good intellects. A man cannot be too careful of the firm. That is all." (Pg. 17) b. "The ugly and the stupid have the best of it in this world." (Pg. 15) c. "the one charm of marriage is that it makes a life of deception absolutely necessary for both parties." (Pg. 15) d. "I choose my friends for their good looks, my acquaintances for their good characters, and my enemies for their good intellects. A man cannot be too careful		Discuss these epigrams from Lord Henry. How do they reveal his character?
 c. "the one charm of marriage is that it makes a life of deception absolutely necessary for both parties." (Pg. 15) d. "I choose my friends for their good looks, my acquaintances for their good characters, and my enemies for their good intellects. A man cannot be too careful 		a. "Conscience and cowardice are really the same things Conscience is the trade-of the firm. That is all." (Pg. 17) necessary for both parties." (Pg. 15) d. "I choose my friends for their good looks, my acquaintances for their good characters, and my enemies for their good intellects. A man cannot be too careful		b. "The ugly and the stupid have the best of it in this world." (Pg. 15) characters, and my enemies for their good intellects. A man cannot be too careful		· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · characters, and my enemies for their good intellects. A man cannot be too careful
	,	